Dr. Tong Wu received her Ph.D. in molecular genetics from Chinese Academy of Sciences. She then worked at Georgia State University and Ottawa Hospital (Civic Campus) as a post-doctoral fellow. Her research included the development of DNA vaccines and novel vaccine adjuvants. Dr. Wu joined the Vaccine Quality Division of Health Canada as a Senior Scientific Evaluator in 2005, and is responsible for submission review and lot release of Inactivated Poliomyelitis Vaccine (IPV) and meningococcal vaccines. Since 2007, Dr. Wu has worked many times as a WHO Temporary Adviser to support WHO in activities related to vaccines, such as preparation of WHO Guidelines as a drafting group member, dossier review for the pre-qualification program, and presentation at workshops for the implementation of WHO guidelines.
