

Thomas Breuer is GSK Vaccines Chief Medical Officer and the lead physician of the company. He leads the Vaccines Medical organization with medical affairs, safety and pharmacovigilance, and patient access functions such as health economics and epidemiology in the regions. In addition, he leads all Global Health activities of the company. Since 2004, Thomas is a member of the management team of GSK Vaccines (VET) and frequently presents GSK Vaccines in the external environment.

From 2007 to 2015 Thomas ran the Vaccines Development Organization and has been instrumental in the development and licensure of many of GSK's vaccines. Before joining the company in 2001, Thomas had a career in internal medicine and public health. After six years in patient care he worked at the US Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, before joining the German Public Health Institute (Robert Koch-Institute) as Head of Infectious Disease Epidemiology in Berlin.

Thomas has a doctorate in medicine from the University of Cologne, Germany. He is board certified in internal medicine and has a Master of Science degree in Epidemiology from the University of Texas.